WHAT IS EARLY INTERVENTION?

Certified by the Department of Public Health, Early Intervention provides services to young children under 36 months who have or are at risk for developmental delays. A team that includes developmental specialists, physical, occupational and speech therapists, work with the family and child to determine their needs and create a care plan. Home visits are provided to enhance the developmental progress of the child.

Kennedy-Donovan Center's Early Intervention Program is comprehensive, family-centered and community based.

TURN TO KDC

Our Early Intervention Program is the place to turn when your infant or toddler (birth to 36 months) is faced with developmental challenges, such as:

Developmental delays in gross and fine motor, receptive and expressive language, social-emotional, self-care or cognitive skills.

Medical conditions or diagnoses affecting development.

Environmental conditions which affect development, such as need for parenting education or a need for social supports for the family.

FINDING HELP

Referrals are made to Early Intervention by parents, physicians and other professionals in the community who have a concern about the child's development and other concerns expressed by the family.

Developmental Evaluations

When a child is referred to Early Intervention, the team will complete a developmental evaluation. This evaluation will look at all areas of development and will determine the child's eligibility for Early Intervention services.

ELIGIBILITY

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health establishes criteria which determine a child and family's eligibility for early intervention services. These criteria include a specifically defined level of delay in development, or at-risk conditions, or an established medical diagnosis.
